1. Introduction should also provide brief details on the research area for new readers
2. Background study needs more work. Provide clear justifications in the paper in selections of the core concern of the research. Literature connection and critique is poor.
3. Justify what gaps in literature is this work filling? or identified open research issues by other influential authors in the area that this study addresses. Formulate a clear problem statement
4. Validation is poor. Clearly mention the research setup and variables of interest and domain related issues. Also justify the analysis criteria and deduction form results criteria.
5. Discuss elaborately what are your main findings? Author should provide effective tables and graphs which mimic the results clearly; also it is needed for all the readers to understand better.

6. Create a separate section of difference from prior work before conclusion and descriptively analyze your work's pros and cons in light of previous literature
7. Provide any limitations and assumptions about variables of interest
8. The concluding remarks is more than a summary of the paper. Write conclusion more like a closing argument based on the data to support your initial hypothesis. Briefly answer the questions posed in the introduction as well as provide insight into the argument as a whole. Write a proper conclusion
9. Author should use grammarly etc software to check the grammar and also check similarity
10. Formatting is not what is required

Note From Handling Editor: Kindly make corrections. You have a 46 page limit in journal format so space is no issue here. Minimum publication requirement is 11+ pages

Watch carefully to prevent plagiarism. Be absolutely certain that your documentation gives full credit for all materials used not only in quotations but in paraphrased form.

1)	Introduction should also provide brief details on the research area for new readers	We provide highlight to explain Sentiment Analysis for new readers: As one of the most recent topic under Natural Language Processing, Sentiment Analysis which is also known as Opinion Mining can be defined as a computational based technique to extract people's opinion from various kind of data including text data grabbed from social media platform. Sentiment Analysis categorizes positive, negative and neutral opinion of text data grabbed from social media dataset (Rintyarna, Sarno and Fatichah, 2020).	2
2)	Background study needs more work. Provide clear justifications in the paper in selections of the core concern of the research. Literature connection and critique is poor.	We have added the work of (Limantara, 2017) as the prominent background study. Meanwhile, (Limantara, 2017) modelling customer perception of organic food consumer using 100 respondents. The employed analysis technique is multi attribute attitude model. We attempt to provide clear justification as follows : Referring to the previously highlighted key reference as background studies, the motivation of this work comprised: <ol style="list-style-type: none"><li>1. Providing an efficient technique based on text intelligence to reveal acceptance model of Indonesian organic food consumption</li><li>2. Applying a sentiment analysis algorithm to extract acceptance model of Indonesian organic food consumption</li></ol>	3

3)	Justify what gaps in literature is this work filling? or identified open research issues by other influential authors in the area that this study addresses. Formulate a clear problem statement	We have justified the research to be filled in this work: The best we know this study is an initial effort to model the organic food consumption of Indonesian consumer using social media analysis technique. The aim of this study is to provide more recent, yet time saving analysis about the purchase decision pattern of Indonesian consumer especially under Covid-19 Pandemic situation.	3
4)	Validation is poor. Clearly mention the research setup and variables of interest and domain related issues. Also justify the analysis criteria and deduction form results criteria.	In short, the research setup will be conducted by following these steps:  1. Grabbing Twitter data from Twitter using Twitter API,  2. Generating word cloud as well as word association using Gephi.  3. Mapping Indonesian organic food consumer acceptance using Sentiment Analysis technique employing VADER from the grabbed Twit.  4. Highlight finding.	6
5)	Discuss elaborately what are your main findings? Author should provide effective tables and graphs which mimic the results clearly; also it is needed for all the readers to understand better.	As presented in Fig 3, the main finding of this work is that 64% Twitter user accept positively organic food as their main dietary food and associate positively organic food with several associated word (as presented in Table 1).
6)	Create a separate section of difference from prior work before conclusion and descriptively analyze your wok's pros and cons in light of previous literature.	We have created separate section:  1. CONTRIBUTION AND ORIGINALITY  There are two type of techniques employed for modeling consumer acceptance toward organic food consumption. The common technique adopted by previous work to reveal Indonesian consumer acceptance toward organic food consumption [17], [18], [19] relies on a pencil survey that analyze the result of respondent's answer to a set of questionnaire. The pencil survey based technique is regarded to be time consuming, costly and sometimes containing bias. In this work, we utilize a more sophisticated method based on Sentiment Analysis of text dataset grabbed from Indonesian	8

		Twitter user. This work is capable of revealing the comparable result as pencil survey technique yet in a timesaving and less expensive manner.
7)	Provide any limitations and assumptions about variables of interest	We have provided limitation of this work: Yet, in this work we do not handle slang word. Handling slang word need to employ a slang word library. We have provided assumption of this work: In this work, we regard Indonesian Twitter user as the sample/ respondents of the research so that we assume that their comments represent people's attitude toward organic food consumption.	4/5
8)	The concluding remarks is more than a summary of the paper. Write conclusion more like a closing argument based on the data to support your initial hypothesis. Briefly answer the questions posed in the introduction as well as provide insight into the argument as a whole. Write a proper conclusion.	We have revised conclusion. Compared with common technique to generate acceptance model of Indonesian organic food consumption that apply pencil survey technique, this work employ a computational intelligence based method that is less expensive yet timesaving with a comparable result. The technique adopts Sentiment Analysis of Twitter Dataset. The technique includes generating word association using Force Atlas2 and sentiment analysis using extended VADER library. Most of the user that positively post organic food, associate the food with "kesehatan", "praktis", and "diet". Meanwhile, the rest post negatively and regard organic food as having expensive price compared with another kind of food. From the grabbed twit, the study also highlights that 64% of twitter user positively accept organic food as their healty daily diet.	9
9)	Author should use grammarly etc software to check the grammar and also check similarity	We have checked spelling using grammarly. We also include the result of similarity check using Turnitin. The similarity index was 15%.

10)	Formatting is not what is required	We have checked the formatting.
